HOFFHEIMER IN A BAD LIGHT.

Mother and Daughter Say He Alone is Respon sible for the Latter's Escapade-Mr. Eberly Evonerated.

The mystery surrounding the disappear an co of Miss Myrtle Wellington, who left her home in this city three weeks ago, has been volved As stated in THE HERALD, already, the young lac'y was found in Ogden and come down from that place with her mother yesterday mornt, 1g, and is now stopping at her on Ninth East street between Sixth and Seventh Son.th. A HERALD reporter called there yesterd y afternoon and found Mrs. Wellington in a very happy frame of mind. When asked to state how she came find her daughter and relate the circumstances of the cave she said:

"Myrtle left my house one night about three weeks ago and for a long time I was unable to find any trace of her wherea-bouts. Henry Hodheimer had been paying her attentions for some time, and there was talk of a marriage, and I was satisfied that he had something to 60 with her disappearance. The last person she was seen with before going, however, was a young man named Clarence Eberly. I had known him for some time and considered him as honorable a gentleman as a ever met, and while I disliked suspecting him everything seemed to indicate that he was in some way connected with the matter. I went to Hoffeimer several times and circumstances of the case she said:

BEGGED HIM TO TELL ME something about my daughter, but he always claimed to know nothing about her and treated me very radely. After awhile, I learned certain facts which proved to me what I was certain of before—that he was at the bottom of the matter, so I stated the case to the district attorney and Hoffheimer and Eberly were arrested. Still I was ignorant as to Myrtle's whereabouts and it was not until yesterday that I learned that she was stopping at the Lincoln lieuse, in Ogden, and in the afternoon I took the tran n for that place. Hoffheimer learned of my departure and tekephoned to the girl, and she left just before I arrived. Then I went to the United States anarshal's office and Deputy Marshal Bowman went to BEGGED HIM TO TELL ME office and Deputy Marshal lowman went to work on the case He followed my daughter to the hot springs north of Ogden, and arrested her and brought her to me this morning. She was so glad to see the. The poor child was almost crazy, and I don't be-lieve she would have lived another week if I had not found her."
"Whatever induced her to go?" asked the "Whatever induced her to go!" asked the reporter.

"Hoffheimer induced her to go through promising to marry her. I don't think she ever cared anything for him, but she was only a girl and he persuaded her to take that first fatal step of leaving her home. Then she felt that she had compromised herself and that she could not return to me until I came for her. But that man Hoffhelmer is an unmitigated villain. He never had an idea of marrying her and all had an idea of marrying her and all HIS MOTIVES WERE DISHONORABLE.

Didn't he tell you that he knew nothing whatever as to the girl's whereabouts?"
"He did," answered the reporter, "and he also said that he knew nothing at all he also said that he knew nothing at all about her disappearance."

"Now let him be judged by that," said the mother. "Don't take my evidence nor my daughter's statement, but just let the people who kept the hotel at Orden testify and judge him by that. It will be proved by them that Hoffneimer was the cause of her going there, and that he kept her there and knew she was there all the time. I want to say that I fully exonerate Mr. Eberly. He is entirely innocent, and I regret having brought him hate the trouble at all."

Miss Wellington was oults ill as the result of her escapade, and was averse to talking. She stated positively, however, HOPPHEIMER ALONE WAS RESPONSIBLE for her disappearance. Hoffbeiner was rearrested yesterday afternoon as Mr. Critchlow feared that his bond of $1,000 would not hold him.

Judge Powers, the defendant's attorney, objected strongly to the bond being in-creased, but Mr. Critchlew insisted that the recent developments justified the court Commissioner Greenman took that view and the bond was increased to $3,000. John Bechtol and Harry T. Duke became the defendant's suretles, and he was released. The preliminary examination will be held on Tuesday morning.

THAT WATER.

To the Editors of THE HERALD: In THE SUNDAY HERALD of May 4, I saw an article headed, "What the Pratt Brothers Say." They say it takes its rise in north Mill Creek canon; then it most assuredly is a part of Mill creek and they go on to say that upon land bought by them of Mr. John Lewis is this large stream of water, which has been used by Mr. Lewis for twenty years or more, and it has always been controlled by Mr. Lewis. Now, the facts of the case are these: Mr. Lewis the facts of the case are these: Mr. Lewis never did control that stream of water, but the water has been controlled by watermasters elected by the people annually for a great number of years. The whole of the water arising in Mill Greek canon was appropriated by the inhabitants of the three Bountifuls over forty years ago. I myself have been water master one year and clerk a number of years, and have in my possession records of the water service that, I think, will forever set the waters of North Mill Greek canon to rest, so far as the prior right of use and appropriation is concerned. And so far as Mr. Lewis' water right in the ration goes, it is to use it to run his sawmill and then let it have free passage down the creek, that the rightful owners of the water may have it to use on their thousands of access of land, according to the local regulations, by the direction and subject to the control of the water masters. John Lewis did have right of use to water for one aree of land, in connection with others, until he sold that one acre and the water right to Mr. Riley.

TOLD AT THE LIARS' CLUB.

The Traditions of That Honorable Asse-

The Liars' club had assembled at the usual place, a small room in Lyric hall, chosen for reasons so obvious that explanation is not necessary. The gas stove had been touched off, the cigars lighted, and the door locked to keep out any vagrant conscientious scruple that might come poking around to disturb any member of the club.

The medal, the reward of him who should tell the biggest whopper, to be worn until the preceding biggest whopper had been outwhopped, reposed upon the breast of the colonel, where it had glittered for the unprecedentedly long period of six months. It was a handsome medal, made of gold eighteen karats fine, bearing upon the one side an idealized head in profile of Ananias, and on its obverse this exalted sentiment: Mendacity is the daughter of inven-

conquering all that sort of thing. So The colonel was proud of his prowes in the science to which the club was devoted. From his early youth he had regarded a good lie as rather to bethosen than great riches. This evening the colonel puffed upon his cigar with an air of supreme self satisfaction. He had just finished telling the most magnificent lie of his life, which was, in brief, that he had once told the truth. It was a short lie, but he felt satisfied with it. Nevertheless, symptoms of disappointment were manifested by his fellow members They liked a good lie as much as the colo self respect should not be told.

"That may do, colonel," put in the major, "among ordinary liars, but with us it doesn't go. We all admit that it hasn't a grain of truth in it, but you weaken your position among men of our standing when you tell a lie of that sort, Any man who will admit that he once told the truth violates one of the first principles of our association. However I, for one, don't believe in rubbing it in You've held on to the medal for six months most nobly, and in view of your past record for pure, unadulterated falsification, it is my sentiment that the club should overlook this evening's faux pas. The man who attempts to hold that little badge of honor which you wear for more than six months has bitten off more than he can chew-like the bull I heard of last week that swallowed a watch when he was a calf."

"What bull was it?" said the colonel. "Why, my butcher was telling me about it. His father once owned a little red bull calf that swallowed the hired man's vest, with his watch and a silver dollar in it-it was ten years ago. Last week the bull was killed, and in cutting him up they found the money and watch in the vest pocket intact."

"A fair story that, but nothing wildly improbable about it," said the colonel. "If the bull had increased the money at the rate of t, per cent, per annum, and had been found with a dollar and sixty cents in his stomach at the end of ten years, we might think something of it."

"Well," said the major, passing lightly over this astonishing criticism, "that's all right, but there was one thing remarkable about the watch. It was going, and hadn't lost a second's time in ten years." "Going? The watch was going?" cried the colonel, his face growing pale with

"Yes, sir; going," replied the major "It was a stem winder, and the wheel had got caught between the animal's lungs, so that every time he breathed he wound the watch up." "Here, major," put in the colonel. "take the medal and give me your butcher's address." The major bowed. Taking the medal he pinned it upon his breast with a sweet "Thunderation!" cried the major, sud denly.

"What is the matter?" queried the colonel. "Are you sick?" put in another. "Bring some brandy!" cried a third.

"The major is going to faint." "No. I'm not," said the major, with a "But, boys, look at the medal." gasp. The "boys" looked, and lo, Ananias have the mercy to kill the poor critters race had turned green.-New York Even-

THE POWER OF A PLUGGED NICKEL

A Whole Carload Fascinated and Embar A tall man with a dark mustache and imperial got into a south bound Broadway car at Twenty-second street the ther day and took a seat about midway up the car. When the conductor came for his fare the man fished a nickel from his pocket. The conductor looked at the coin sharply and passed it back again.

"What's the matter?" asked the man. "It's plugged," said the conductor. The man put a pair of eyeglasses on his nose and critically surveyed the nickel. He found that the conductor was correct, and handed him a good nickel. He was about to put the bad one back into his pocket when he noticed that every one in the car was looking at him. He turned very red, hesitated, and finally dropped the nickel slyly on the floor. Every one saw him do it, but every one tried to appear as if he didn't notice it. The nickel lay on the floor in plain sight, but no one would look at it. All seemed to think that they would appear as if they coveted it if they did. Every one seemed quite uncomfortable. Two or three men tried to read, but they couldn't concentrate their attention on their newspapers. The conductor passed over the nickel once or twice, and tried not to notice it. At Fourteenth street a man got in and was about to sit down, when he espied the nickel. He picked it up and tried to hand it to an old gentleman with a red face and a white mustache, saying, "You dropped this, sir. "No, I didn't," said the old gentleman with a laugh.

Then everybody laughed, as if greatly relieved. The man who had picked up the nickel looked closely at it, turned bright crimson and dropped it again. Everybody saw him, but whichever way he looked he saw only averted faces. The people would glance slyly at him from the corners of their eyes, and then look away again very quickly. Again no one looked at the nickel, although every man there knew to a nicety just where it lay. It stayed in the same place on the floor until the car stopped just above Chambers street. Here the J. conductor told the passengers to take the next car, as that one was going to switch off and go up town again. As they left the car all the passengers took a last glance at the plugged nickel, but no one touched it. It started up town again, and all the passengers went down town with that nickel weighing heavily on their minds.-New York Sun.
